

Julius Yang, M.D.
Associate Director
Internal Medicine Training Program

Dr. Julius Yang is a hospitalist in the Division of General Medicine and Primary Care at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center and an instructor in medicine at Harvard Medical School. Dr. Yang completed his undergraduate education at Williams College, then went on to earn a Ph.D. in physical chemistry at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He attended medical school at the University of Massachusetts Medical School. He completed his residency training in internal medicine at the Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center (BIDMC), at the conclusion of which he was awarded the Kathy Swan Ginsburg Award for humanism in medicine. After serving one year as a chief resident at BIDMC, Dr. Yang completed a Fellowship in Medical Education at the Carl J. Shapiro Institute for Education and Research. In his role as a hospitalist, Dr. Yang actively teaches and mentors residents, interns, and medical students while providing clinical care to patients hospitalized at BIDMC. He was awarded the Herrman L. Blumgart Faculty Award in 2005 for his contributions to housestaff education and professional development.

In addition to his current role as an associate director of the BIDMC residency program, Dr. Yang serves as the Director of Inpatient Quality for the Department of Health Care Quality at BIDMC, serves as chair of the BIDMC Resuscitation Committee and Inpatient Clinical Applications IT Committee, and is a core faculty member in medical simulation training at BIDMC.
